[ Meta-Duality: no Ontology without Epistemology, no Epistemology without Ontology ]

My enacted "middle-way²"/scybernethics bidimenTional (quasi-bidimensional) view: there is no "form" ontology without epistemology.

Being and knowing are two faces of the same coin

[ Key Distinction: Appearance//Illusion ]

"To mistake appearance for illusion is to undercut the very grounds on which intelligibility rests."

A very important distinction<sup>2</sup> that binary "realist" & techno-transjective polarizations (true/false, 1/0) tends to confuse by

The classical tradition held that the soul has many faculties—sensation, memory, imagination, reason, contemplation—and that each must be cultivated through a discipline of attention to the world.

The highest of these, contemplation (theōria), perceives form.

But when the

Theōria and the Disappearance of Form

What happens to the contemplative intellect when the reality of its objects is denied? A reflection on perception, practice, and the intelligibility of being

Epistemology (interaction, knowing, con-science)

= epistemo-ontology or onto-epistemology.

Both<sup>2</sup> are necessary for a viable future. This is "crucial" (cf. crux).
