[Enacting Second-Order Ethics²] 🧵 □

"The knowledge of knowledge compels."

"Cognition does not concern objects, for cognition is effective action, and as we know how we know, we bring forth ourselves."

"Through our knowledge of our knowledge, implies an ethics that we cannot evade, an ethics that has its reference point in the awareness of the biological and social structure of human beings, an ethics that springs from human reflection and puts human reflection right at the core as a constitutive social phenomenon."

"The knowledge of this knowledge constitutes the social imperative for a human centered ethics."

- Maturana & Varela, The Tree of Knowledge.

"He who reflects on reflexion, could gain highly interesting insights."

- Maturana.
