[Thinking differently: Second-order Thinking²]

Thinking² is the intellectual way to transition iteratively from a cognitivist first order to a more comprehensive second-order enactive, ie also phenomenologically embodied, thinking.

1/3

This is done through the progressive awareness of the ambijective gesture, ie the recursive dimension of our intentional act (Brentano^{}) which is also the subjective polarity of our agency ("sense of agency"). 2/3

 I'm speaking here of the original meaning of phenomenological intentionality as stated by Brentano, not about the misleading error of translation done by Chisholm, inducing the confusion in a all generation of analytical thinkers (like Quine). 3/3
