[Key Distinction: Appearance//Illusion]

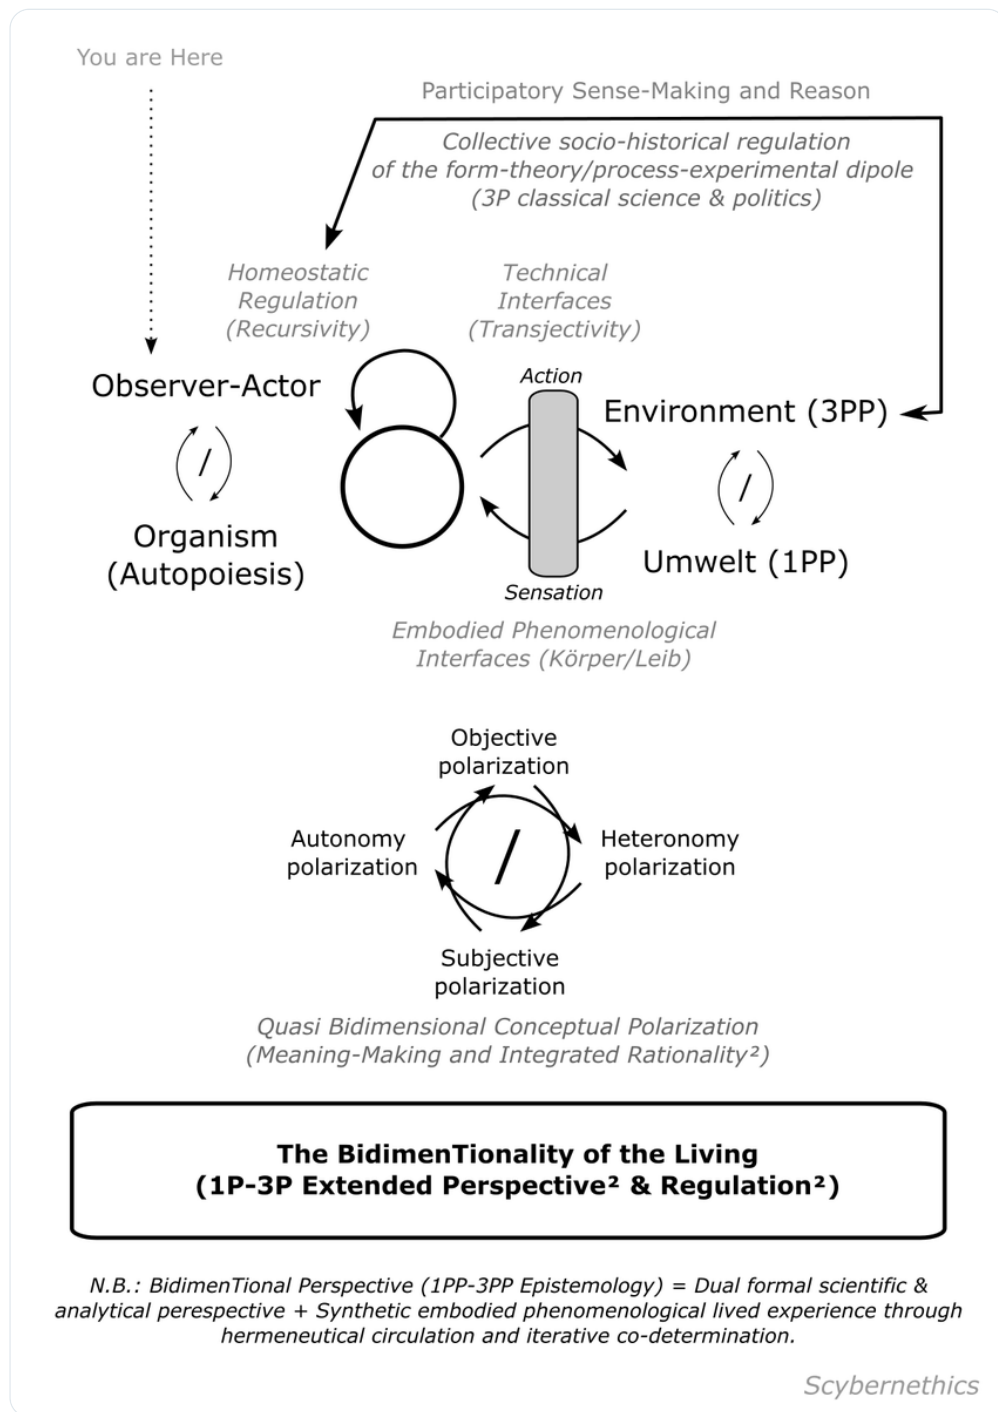

"To mistake appearance for illusion is to undercut the very grounds on which intelligibility rests."

A very important distinction² that binary "realist" & techno-transjective polarizations (true/false, 1/0) tends to confuse by flattening (mono-dimensionality) BOTH the environment (objectivist 3PP polarity)/Umwelt (subjectivist 1PP) AND the action/sensation-perception, which are key co-determining distinctions for meaning-making & intelligibility in a complex world.

The actual convergence between naive (non-phenomenological) realism & transjective (confusion object/subject) technologies is, in its excess, a collective poison leading socially to a loss of embodied know-how (proletarianization, cognitive today with digital psycho-techs) and to political logics of power where rationality is instrumentalized and degenerated into pure rhetorical sophisms to justify action in populist terms. A self-sustaining convergent logic of action for action, i.e. fascism (etym. fascio = convergent beam).
